INTRODUCTION

In my childhood and teenage years the Torah's doors had not yet opened for me. I found the Torah reading in synagogue thoroughly boring and devoid of meaning. I didn't understand Hebrew, and the antiquated translation and commentary available to me were really quite disturbing. Something was tugging at me, probably a sense of family and peoplehood; but why did our customs seem to be so weird and incomprehensible? And why did nothing in the synagogue actually make me feel accomplished and adequate? It all seemed so burdensome.

I never dreamt that the Torah could be a powerful tool of personal transformation, and that it could calm the worries of my body, mind, heart and soul on a daily basis. I had no idea that the text which appeared to me so boring would, in fact, relieve much of the existential boredom of my adult life and infuse it with meaning.

There is a reason why the Torah—the Five Books of Moses—is the oldest sacred text in western civilization that has been in constant use: Because the Torah reflects your own life back to you.

The Torah is not a story about some other people and it is not about some other time. It is a guide to your inner self, which, if read properly, can illuminate every possible human experience.

This book will prime you to read the Torah as a guide to life. You will learn to appreciate every line, perhaps every word, of the Torah as a set of tools that empower you to expand consciousness, to discover your humanity, and to cultivate your inner life.

These pages don't contain any of my own ideas. I have merely collected teachings of the great Rabbinic minds of the past two thousand years, rendering them in a contemporary voice. But you will probably find it different from any Torah commentary you have read before, because I have chosen to emphasize things that others have generally overlooked.

You see, most commentaries presume that the reader is extremely interested in the text, that he or she wants to pore over multiple possible translations, delve into the nuances of the Hebrew language, uncover inconsistencies and fix them, or be exposed to as many interpretations as possible. I'm presuming that you're not especially interested in that kind of stuff. I've included some of it—probably accounting for around ten to twenty percent of the commentary—just so that you get a “balanced diet,” but I have mainly looked for something else. My key criterion for selecting comments has been relevancy. When selecting a passage I repeatedly asked myself: Is this insightful? Is it life-enhancing? Does this open new possibilities for self-transformation? Is it refreshing?

In other words, I'm presuming that you're turning to this book primarily for guidance in your life, to enhance your stay on this planet, and not to become the world's next great Biblical scholar.

Are we betraying the Torah's sanctity by turning it into some sort of “self-help” book?

Absolutely not. In fact, we betray the Torah by not doing so. “Torah” is usually translated as “law,” but in Hebrew it is also derived from the word hora'ah, meaning “lesson” or “guidance.” If you study the Torah in a mood of personal detachment, you fail to capture its essence and spirit. The Torah is meant to engage you.

And when I say “guidance” I am not talking here about Jewish law (halakhah). The Five Books of Moses are the source text for an enormous body of civil, criminal and ritual law which was codified in the Talmud, and subsequently in the 16th century Code of Rabbi Joseph Caro, the Shulḥan Arukh (“Set Table”). While this is extremely important, it has not been my focus here, and is amply dealt with in other works.

I want you to experience the Torah as a guide to inner life, as a tremendous blessing which simply needs to be unwrapped like a gift. I want the Torah to be a revelation which flows forth to you in the present moment. I want you to read each Torah portion as your spiritual homework for the week, helping you to reach the fullness of your humanity—something that heals your soul, and thereby the world.

All of this is to be found in the Torah and its vast ocean of classic commentaries. I have spent the last fifteen years of my life learning how to read the Torah as a book of hora'ah, insight and guidance, and this book is a humble offering to you of some of the lessons I have gathered.

If you want the Torah to be a blessing in your life, it's crucial that you have the right attitude towards reading and studying it. The emphasis should be on savoring every word and allowing it to penetrate you. Sacred energy is gushing forth when the Torah is read in the synagogue, or even when you read the text in the privacy of your own home, and you need to surrender to its power so that it can begin to transform you.

Don't be concerned if this kind of language is unfamiliar to you. As with anything, you will come to it with time. While volumes could be filled with this topic, I'd like to give you just a few basic pointers as to how to open yourself to the Torah's transformational and healing properties.

There are several phases to this process, which could be briefly summed-up as: awakening, self-realization, growth and healing.

- First, you must awaken from the constraints of your narrow consciousness. That's a fancy way of saying that you need to expose the faulty thought patterns that have led you to unhealthy or dysfunctional behavior.
- Self-realization is the difficult task of acknowledging your resistance to healing and becoming convinced that you have a problem that needs fixing.
- Then you need to grow, by repeatedly meditating on the Torah insight which initially brought about your awakening, affirming its truth over an extended period of time so that it gradually becomes your new perception of reality.
- Once this elevated perspective of life becomes the norm, you will begin to heal, over a period of weeks, months, or perhaps, years.

You've probably realized by now that surrendering to the Torah's power is far from a passive experience. Surrendering doesn't mean sitting back and doing nothing while the Torah does its work. It's an arduous process of releasing your attachment to unhealthy mind patterns that you mistakenly thought were a source of stability and security, and replacing them with attitudes that are truer to your real self and essence.

And this brings me to another point. What determines whether a thought pattern is dysfunctional or healthy?

It's often very difficult to tell, since we are all such masters of self-deception when it comes to these things, but I'm going to give you a couple of very important rules which will help you navigate the turbulent waters of personal transformation and healing.

The arrows of growth always point in the direction of interconnectedness and love, and away from separation and fear.

From a very young age, you learned that this world is a dangerous place. If you hit your knee on a table, it hurt. There were times when you were distressed and nobody really understood. People were nasty towards you because they wanted to gain something for themselves. So you slowly developed a scarcity mentality, imagining that the pleasurable stuff of this life is in short supply and nobody except “yours truly” is going to ensure that you get your fair share (or more than your fair share). These kinds of thoughts fuel an outlook of separation and fear. The result is that you desperately cling to whatever you think is going to provide you with the security and bounty that you need in this lonely, dangerous world.

The Torah teaches that this kind of attitude is incorrect and dysfunctional. Your trust in mankind, and in God, might have been tested by some unpleasant experiences, but goodness is going to come your way by expanding your mind, not by narrowing it. If you can learn to love and identify with all of God’s creatures, by training your eye to see the spark of goodness in everything and the utter sacredness hidden just below the surface of mundane acts, then you will feel safe enough to start shedding your dysfunctional attitudes of fear and isolation. These emotions suffocate your spirit and dim your light, because your mind is not made to function in a state of constriction. Daily, we are told in the Torah to leave Egypt (mitzrayim): we are to depart from the mind-set of narrowness and constriction (metzarim).

How can you tell if you are succeeding in this journey of tikkun, healing yourself and, ultimately, the universe?

You will notice a gradual shift from resentment to wonder.

When you look at the world through the narrow lens of fear and separation, you are always angry at something. You don’t have enough of what you need. Somebody is wronging you or treating you unfairly. If only your boss, or your spouse, or your kids would change, then everything would be okay. So much seems to be in the hand of circumstances beyond your control.

As you heal, you begin to look at this world in wonder and gratitude. Every person you meet, all the details of the natural world, and even—yes, even the difficulties of life, are all enriching encounters with the all-pervasive Divine presence. You come to know that you are the universe in microcosm. Everything you see or hear teaches you something about yourself. And it works the other way too: as you heal yourself, you are making the universe a better place.

You realize that everything is in your hands. The more positive you'll be, the more you'll cheer up your surroundings, engendering more healthy relationships at work and at home. Instead of worrying about what you don't have and what might soon go wrong, you are overwhelmed by encountering God's presence in all the people you meet, all the events of your life and the words of Torah that you read—embracing it all in radical amazement. As you shift from anger to wonder, you will attract wholesome people and experiences to your life, and negative things will either depart or they will be reframed in a different light. You'll realize that they were only there because you had invited them in.

I have not completed this journey, but I am on my way and I know which directions the arrows face. This book will, I hope, be a great blessing to your life, igniting and fanning your inner flame for many years to come.

If your perception of the Torah is only as a book of law, then you will read the numerous instructions in this book as “commandments”—an ethical and religious code of conduct. But the word mitzvah, has another, extremely important connotation; it also means “connection.”

A mitzvah is a connection ritual, a sacred technology that brings you closer to God.

If you observe a mitzvah purely out of a sense of fear, or to feel good, or to appear religious (to yourself or to others), or to please your parents, or your spouse, or your rabbi—then you have missed the most important point. A mitzvah is a powerful act of connection which slices through the myriad layers of “white noise” that separate you from the Power of the universe. But for it to be fully effective you need to be conscious of what you are doing. Like any spiritual practice, the mitzvah requires a focused intention and awareness for it to be a fully transformational force.

To appreciate this book and to harness its powers of personal healing, you need to go beyond just reading, thinking and talking about it; you need to start doing it. Regardless of your current level of observance, I recommend that you begin by focusing on a handful of mitzvot—and it doesn't matter in the slightest whether these are mitzvot which you observe already, have observed in the past and now lapsed, or have never observed at all. These will become your spiritual work, your primary connection rituals.

You know that when your mind is narrow, fear and separation rule supreme. Your special mitzvot will connect you to God, expanding the boundaries of your soul and warming your heart; they will stimulate that part of you which is never judgmental, always connected, and gushing with love. As you practice your special mitzvot regularly, you will deepen and refine the experience over time.

A few words about the translation and commentary. The Torah, of course, was written in ancient Hebrew, which is really quite impossible to translate into English. That's because the two tongues differ so radically: Hebrew is a pregnant language, as opposed to English, which is a precise tongue. A single Hebrew word lends itself to multiple interpretations; it is pregnant with meaning. In fact, it may have many different possible translations, and since the Torah text in its original source contains no vowels or punctuation, it could literally have a host of renditions.

English, on the other hand, is extremely precise. There are a host of different words to say the same thing, each differing slightly in nuance and implication. So by its very nature, an English word carries a certain connotation and level of emphasis which is just not present in biblical Hebrew.

Any English translation of the Torah is only able to bring to light one facet of the multiple meanings and implications that are present in the Hebrew original. In other words, the translation really is a commentary. It must take a particular approach to decoding the source text.

Since this fact is disconcerting—an honest translator wishes to render the text as it is from one language to another—most translations of the Torah try to hide their inevitable exegetical bias. They present commentary and interpretation as if it were straight translation (although to minimize the problem they usually follow the most straightforward and simple commentaries).

I have taken a more open approach. I figure that if my “translation” has to be a very particular interpretation/commentary then this fact needs to be obvious. So I have placed anything that is “interpretive” in nature in parentheses, to distinguish it from the rest of the text which is a more or less “pure” translation.

Another courageous leap is that I have stuck exclusively to one particular interpretation of the text. It is always easier for the translator to pick and choose which interpretation to follow on a verse-by-verse basis. While the result may be clearer, it is exegetically disjointed. One phrase may be rendered from an interpretative viewpoint which is at odds with the next one.

So I have opted for consistency, following the interpretation of Rabbi Solomon Yitzhaki (known by the acronym of his Hebrew name, Rashi), the 11th century French commentator of Bible and Talmud. Avoiding this approach might have made my task as translator—and yours as reader—a lot easier. But Rashi is the most popular, most printed and most loved of all the Torah commentaries; and, I believe, even his more “alarming” interpretations are motivated by a rigorous internal consistency. So by following Rashi, and highlighting his exegetical comments in parentheses, I hope to have rendered a translation which is thoroughly transparent to its biases and historically consistent with the way the Torah has popularly been taught and read for the past nine hundred years, or so.

A small final point—which is kind of obvious but I will state it in any case—is that any part of the text which seems to be intended as an instruction (command) as opposed to narrative, has been presented as a bulleted list, for the sake of clarity and an easier read.

I’ve already told you my criteria for choosing and adapting the commentaries presented on each page, so I won’t repeat them here. But a word or two is in order about the highlighted features which are swimming inside the commentary: Kabbalah Bites, Spiritual Vitamins and Food for Thought.

Kabbalah is Jewish esotericism. It seeks to open and expose classical texts, rather than to merely understand and explain them. Its teachings, the most important of which are found in the Zohar (Book of Radiance) and the writings of Rabbi Isaac Luria (16th century), offer a bold transformation of the scriptural understanding of God and the universe.

In the Bible, the relationship between us and God seems largely covenantal: we enter into an agreement with God to observe certain ethical and ritual practices, and this pleases Him. When God is happy, He directs the events of our lives, and of history in general, for the good.

According to the Kabbalah, these same ethical and ritual deeds are perceived as having a strikingly different role. God and the world are linked in a causal system. Through the correct actions and intentions we somehow “activate” the Godhead, harmonize Divine emanations, and cause them to flow into the world, bringing the desired positive results.

That does not mean to say that we have stripped God of His will, or that man is now controlling God, because in the Kabbalistic system man can only influence God’s emanations, not His infinite, unknowable essence. By drawing this important distinction, we preserve God’s utter aloofness and oneness, while at the same time rendering Him extremely accessible and even subject to human influence. Most of the Kabbalah is devoted to a discussion of these complex and dynamic Divine emanations, the core of which are called the ten sefirot.

The origins of the Kabbalah are extremely obscure because any public teaching of this wisdom violated the basic rule of esotericism: secrecy. Besides the obvious fear of error (the doctrine of the sefirot treads extremely close to a heretical pluralism), Kabbalists felt that popularizing such intimate secrets about the Godhead was simply inappropriate; this was for the eyes of a few enlightened souls only. So while the Zohar, for example, only began to emerge in the thirteenth century, the Kabbalah was in the hands of an elite few for many centuries prior to that. Some see it as being as old as Judaism itself—or even older, attributing Kabbalistic knowledge to Adam, the first man.

But what is undisputed is that since the sixteenth century and on, Kabbalistic ideas have become irreversibly enmeshed in the beliefs and observances of Judaism. And in today’s postmodern climate, interest in the Kabbalah has flourished more than ever.

Kabbalah comes from the root k b l, which means “receive,” to stress that it was not the figment of human imagination, but was actually received from a higher source. This is especially important to stress in the case of esoteric wisdom, because, unlike the exoteric law which follows strictly defined rules of exegesis, there is no critique which can be applied to test the validity of a proposed esoteric teaching. Either you accept it because it comes from a reliable source, or you reject it. It cannot be evaluated by any revealed, traditional system.

What does the Kabbalah discuss? In addition to dealing with conventional theological topics such as creation, God’s emanations, man’s soul, the meaning of the commandments, the problem of evil, and the afterlife, Kabbalistic wisdom also includes fascinating discussions of more obscure topics, such as demonology, reincarnation (gilgul) and astrology.

The “Kabbalah Bites” presented here do little justice to this fascinating and immense body of Jewish esoteric wisdom. But for the vast majority of people who are intrigued by the Kabbalah but have never tasted from it, these insights will provide an excellent primer. No background knowledge should be required to understand them, other than what I have written here. (Sources for each “bite” are found in the back of this volume.)

The “Spiritual Vitamins” interspersed throughout this book are based on traditional, Rabbinic Judaism. They are novel in the sense that they are not actually a commentary on the Torah at all. I placed them here out of the conviction that you might often read the Torah on a weekly or even daily basis looking for suggestions or ideas of how to bring the teachings of Judaism directly and practically into your life. I wanted to make sure that you always find inspirational teachings of healing, awareness and well-being without having to look too hard, wading through scripture, commentary and super-commentary. I hope you find these “vitamins” gentle and affirming, and that they help to make your day more fulfilling, less stressful and a little happier.

Each weekly Torah reading provides plenty of material for stimulating discussion—in the classroom, or around the family table—about a broad range of ethical, personal and behavioral issues. The Torah and its commentaries are not only meant to impart you with wisdom as a passive receiver, they should also stimulate your mind and get you thinking. So I have included here some points for discussion and contemplation, under the heading “Food for Thought.” No answers are given, of course, because that would defy the point. Some parts of the learning experience cannot be spoon-fed.

My favorite part of writing a book is the acknowledgments. Unlike a regular “thank you” which easily gets lost in the wind, a written, published acknowledgement is eternal, and that thought is awesome.

First and foremost I would like to thank David Slager whose tireless support of my work has made this book possible. David is an outstandingly generous man, and his philanthropy to countless causes around the globe has been an inspiration to thousands of people. Thank you, David, for your friendship, for your support, and for believing so strongly in what I do. May God bless you, Lara and your precious daughters Hannah and Sara Malka, both physically and spiritually.

My partner in publishing for close to a decade has been my dear friend Rabbi Meyer Gutnick. Meyer is a person who simply takes pleasure in helping people and in getting things done. I was unbelievably fortunate that he chose to support my writing career, not only financially but also with so much of his time and energy. Not many people get to write a Torah commentary in their lifetime, and I have now the merit of writing two. Thanks to Meyer, the first was a resounding success, and it is a privilege to have him behind this project too. Thank you, Meyer, for your love, support and dedication, and for being patient with me and giving me the space and peace of mind to work freely and productively. May God bless you, Shaindy and all your wonderful family forever.

Putting a work like this together is a formidable task, and would not have been possible without the dedicated assistance of many. First, the loyal team in my office who have really made this project a labor of love. I thank you all for tolerating me and for working so hard on this project: Rabbis Itzik Yarmush, Mendy Angyalfi, Yaakov Paley, Yossi Barber, Menachem Kirschenbaum and Chani Telsner. I also thank the following for their significant contributions: Rabbi Mendy Lent, Rabbi Shmuel Rabin, Chaviva Galatz, Nancy Rosenbaum, Chana Boteach, Chaya Sara Cantor, Yehudis Homnick, Sarah Yarmush, Ya'akovah Weber, Sarah Lehat, Boruch Ezagui, Mendel Katzman, Yehuda Kirsh, Zushe Greisman and Raphael Freeman. I extend a special thanks to Yossi Belkin for designing the beautiful front cover and for his tireless assistance with much of the interior design.

May God bless my wife, Chani, and our wonderful children, Leah, Mendel, Mushka, Levi and Esther Miriam, with a vibrancy of spirit and a sincerity of heart, to aspire to goodness all their lives and to live with the Torah.

BLESSINGS ON READING the TORAH

The Reader indicates the section in the Torah scroll about to be read.

The one called to the Torah touches the text of the scroll at the place indicated with a corner of his tallit, tefillin strap, or the belt/mantle of the Torah, which he then kisses.

Holding the handles of the Torah scroll, he begins the blessing.

בְּרָכּוֹ אֶת יְיָ הַמְּבַרֵךְ.

Congregation responds:

בְּרוּךְ יְיָ הַמְּבַרֵךְ לְעוֹלָם וָעֶד.

The one called to the Torah continues:

בְּרוּךְ יְיָ הַמְּבַרֵךְ לְעוֹלָם וָעֶד:

בְּרוּךְ אַתָּה יְיָ אֱלֹהֵינוּ מֶלֶךְ הָעוֹלָם, אֲשֶׁר בָּחַר בְּנוֹ
מִכָּל הָעַמִּים, וְנָתַן לָנוּ אֶת תּוֹרָתוֹ. בְּרוּךְ אַתָּה יְיָ, נוֹתֵן הַתּוֹרָה:

After the Torah is read, the one called to the Torah concludes:

בְּרוּךְ אַתָּה יְיָ אֱלֹהֵינוּ מֶלֶךְ הָעוֹלָם, אֲשֶׁר נָתַן לָנוּ
תּוֹרַת אֱמֶת, וְחַיֵּי עוֹלָם נִטַּע בְּתוֹכֵנוּ. בְּרוּךְ אַתָּה

ACHIEVEMENTS

Formed by God out of Adam’s thirteenth rib; was created fully developed as a twenty-year-old

KNOWN FOR

Was extremely beautiful; influenced by the serpent to first touch the Tree of Knowledge and then to eat from its fruit, together with her husband; cursed that women would have pain in childbirth

CREATION

God created the world with the intention that we should sanctify the mundane, making a “home” for Him down below. God constantly recreates the world, keeping us in existence for this purpose (1:1).

TIME

God finished working exactly as the Sabbath began. Every single moment is important and you should endeavor to not misuse or waste even a second (2:2).

WHERE ARE YOU?

God knew where Adam was, but He still asked him, “Where are you?” Every day God says to you, “Where are you?”—how are you using your capabilities and talents to make the world a better place? (3:9).

1 בְּרֵאשִׁית בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים אֶת הַשָּׁמַיִם וְאֶת הָאָרֶץ: 2 וְהָאָרֶץ הִיְתְּהָ תֵהוֹ וְנָהוּ וְחֹשֶׁךְ עַל־פְּנֵי תְהוֹם וְרוּחַ אֱלֹהִים מְרַחֶפֶת עַל־פְּנֵי הַמַּיִם: 3 וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יְהי אֹר וַיְהי־אֹר: 4 וַיֵּרָא אֱלֹהִים אֶת־הָאֹר כִּי־טוֹב וַיַּבְדֵּל אֱלֹהִים בֵּין הָאֹר וּבֵין הַחֹשֶׁךְ: 5 וַיִּקְרָא אֱלֹהִים | לְאֹר יוֹם וּלְחֹשֶׁךְ קִרְא לַיְלָה וַיְהי־עֶרֶב וַיְהי־בֹקֶר יוֹם אֶחָד: 6 וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יְהי רְקיעַ בְּתוֹךְ

But this enormous love would have completely overwhelmed the Creation, bringing about its annihilation, so it had to be restrained. God therefore looked at the future deeds of the wicked, and His powers of severity were aroused. This is what made it possible to create the world (Rabbi Gedaliah b. Isaac of Lunietz, 18th century).

2. Astoundingly desolate. God desires a “home” in the lowest realms (Midrash Tanhuma).

The world began with utter desolation—the lowest of all existence—into which light and the Torah were then added (Rabbi Alexander Zusya ha-Kohen, 19th century).

God’s breath. This “breath” refers to the spirit of the Messiah (Genesis Rabbah).

The concept of the Messiah is even more primal than that of light, for the spirit of the Messiah preceded the creation of light (Rabbi Moses Aryeh Leib Lits-Rosenbaum, 19th century).

Hovered. Kabbalah teaches that the purpose of Creation is to elevate two hundred and eighty-eight Godly “sparks” which are trapped in the physical world. This number is hinted to by the word “hovered,” meraḥefet, whose root letters resh-pe-het have the numerical equivalent of two hundred and eighty-eight (Rabbi Hayyim b. Joseph Vital, 16th–17th century).

4. God separated the light from the darkness. God saw that this primordial light was good and it was not proper for the wicked to use it, so He put it away for the righteous in the future (Rashi, 11th century).

The light which was created on the first day had two properties: (a) its superficial quality of physical illumination; and (b) an inner, deeper “goodness” that was detached (Rabbi Judah Loew b. Bezalel of Prague, 16th century).

The form of the light was altered. In its original form it had such a potent spirituality that it negated man’s free choice, giving him no opportunity to sin. By revealing truth, the inner purpose of every object was plainly evident.

In its altered state, the spirituality of the light was “separated” for all future generations, with the provision that people obtain it through their own efforts in genuine worship. Men who use their free choice unwisely do not receive it at all (Rabbi Israel Friedman of Ruzhin, 19th century).

1:1 Before God created this world He created other, spiritual worlds, but He was not happy with them, so He destroyed them. The problem with all those worlds is that they lacked empathy; they were worlds of tohu (chaos) because their constituent forces could not tolerate each other. Our world, which God favored, is called tikkun (corrected), because every element of this world has the capability to appreciate everything else.

parashat bere'shit

Creation: The First Day—Light and Darkness

I¹ In the beginning of God's creation of the heavens and the earth (and their contents),² when the earth was astoundingly desolate, darkness was on the surface of the deep (waters that covered the land), and the (throne of) God('s glory) hovered over the water (at the command of God's) breath,³ God said, "Let there be light!"—and there was light.

⁴ God saw that the light was good, and God separated the (times of) light from the (times of) darkness (in the following manner:)⁵ God called out to the light (and assigned it to the) day, and He called out to the darkness (and assigned it to) the night.

It became evening and it became morning—one day.

The Second Day—Separation of Waters

⁶ God said, "Let the firmament (materialize) between the waters, and let it separate between (the upper) waters and (the lower) waters."

1:1 In the beginning (bere'shit) of God's creation. What is the significance of the Torah beginning with the second letter of the Hebrew alphabet, bet? Why did it not start with the first letter, alef?

Bet is the first letter of the word berakhah, "blessing," whereas alef is the first letter of the word 'arur, "curse." God said, "I will not create the world with an alef; so that people should not say, 'How can you expect the world to endure if it was created with a letter of curses?' Instead, I will create the world with the letter bet that suggests blessing—and I wish that it will endure" (Jerusalem Talmud, Hagigah 2:1).

The Torah begins with the second letter of the Hebrew alphabet, bet, which has a numerical value of two, alluding to the creation of two worlds: this world and the afterlife (Rabbi Jacob b. Asher, 13th–14th century).

A foundation of Torah is the belief that God created the universe ex nihilo. The phrase "In the beginning" should not be understood in terms of time, for time itself is a creation. Time is dependent upon the movement of the heavenly bodies, and they too were created (Maimonides, 12th century).

Just as God renews the Creation every day, you too must make some innovation in this world every single day (Rabbi Aaron b. Jacob of Karlin, 18th century).

When God foresaw the future deeds of the righteous, it aroused in Him a very great longing to bestow good upon them, and this is what prompted Him to create the world.

food for thought

1. "In the beginning of God's creation"—why do you think we exist?

2. "It was good"—how often do you contemplate the beauty of Creation?

3. "Let there be light!"—what light have you brought to your surroundings?

heavens to grant them life. For if the letters were to depart even for an instant, God forbid, and return to their source, all the heavens would revert to absolute nothingness, and it would be as though they had never existed at all (Rabbi Israel Baal Shem Tov, 18th century).

10. God called the dry land “earth” (aretz). After a while, the habitual pleasures of life begin to lose their appeal. One thing, however, which is always a great source of pleasure to man is the ability to give to others, so that they can enjoy life.

The same is true with God, so to speak. His greatest pleasure is not to receive, but to provide. “God called the dry land ‘aretz’”—dry land gave Him the greatest pleasure, because it satisfied His desire to give, making human life possible. Therefore He named it aretz, which also means “desire” (Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel of Apta, 18th century).

11. Let the earth be covered with ... trees (with edible bark that tastes like its) fruit. God instructed that the tree should taste like the fruit, but the earth did not comply. Therefore, when man was cursed because of his sin, the earth too was punished for its sin (Rashi, 11th century).

Obviously the earth, which has no free choice, did not sin in the literal sense. Rather, what Rashi is pointing to here is an intrinsic metaphysical flaw in all earthly, physical things.

The physical world is situated at the end of countless worlds of emanation, so it is, by definition, a recipient. Because of this, a recipient mentality plagues the earth and everything that was created from it—an overstated desire to receive and a reluctance to give. This is ultimately the cause of all our sins.

Here, at the beginning of Creation, this flaw first began to manifest itself with the creation of the fruit tree. Mirroring the physical and

⁸ God called the firmament “sky.”

It became evening and it became morning—a second day.

The Third Day—Land and Vegetation

⁹ God said, “Let the water that is below the skies gather into one location, and let the dry land appear!”—and that is what happened.

¹⁰ God called the dry land “earth,” and He called the gathering of the waters “seas.” God saw that (the work) was good.

¹¹ God said, “Let the earth be covered with vegetation, plants that reproduce by seed, and trees (with edible bark that tastes like its) fruit, which produce fruit of their own species containing their own seed, over the earth!”—and that is what happened. ¹² The earth germinated vegetation, plants that reproduce by seed of their own species, and fruit-producing trees, in which seeds of its own species are found.

impart flavor to the tree, it could not do so, because, as a recipient, the earth was metaphysically inferior to the tree—a provider.

Man, who was created from the earth, also inherited the recipient mentality. He was therefore attracted to the fruit which possessed the same flaw as himself. His sin was that he detached the fruit from the tree—he made receiving primary and giving secondary (Rabbi Judah Loew b. Bezalel of Prague, 16th century).

26. God (consulted the Heavenly Court and) said, “Let us make man in our mold.” The Torah’s term for “man,” adam, comes from the term domeh, “comparison.”

Once God had finished the work of Creation, He desired that His handiwork could appreciate His work and marvel at the complexity of the universe. Until that point, only fish, birds, and mammals had been created—creatures that understand things according to their own limited context.

So God created adam, the “creature of comparison.” Combining elements of the spiritual and physical realms—a clay body and a Godly soul—resulted in a creature with the exclusively

The Fifth Day—Small Creatures, Fish and Birds

²⁰ God said, “Let the waters produce swarms of (small) living creatures, and let birds fly over the earth, across the firmament of the skies!”

²¹ God created the large sea fish, all the creeping living creatures that the waters produced in swarms, according to their species, and all the winged birds according to their species.

God saw that it was good.

²² God blessed them, saying, “Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the waters of the seas, and let the birds multiply upon the earth!”

²³ It became evening and it became morning—a fifth day.

The Sixth Day—Animals and Man

²⁴ God said, “Let the earth produce living creatures according to their (various) species, cattle, creeping things and wild animals of the earth according to their (various) species!”—and that is what happened.

²⁵ God made the wild animals of the earth according to their (various) species, the cattle according to their (various) species, and all the creeping things of the ground according to their (various) species.

God saw that it was good.

²⁶ God (consulted the Heavenly Court and) said, “Let us make man [’adam] in our mold, (intellectually endowed) like us, and (if he is worthy) let him rule over spiritual worlds, the fruit and its tree are in a recipient-provider relationship: the tree provides nourishment from the ground, which the fruit absorbs and stores. When God told the earth to entirely populated with dishonest and quarrelsome people? Surely it was obvious that there would be a mixture of temperaments?

The opposing angels' argument was that, in many instances, life will place man in a situation of irresolvable dilemma. If he follows the path of truth, he will offend his fellow; if he follows the path of peace, he will be guilty of dishonesty. Neither group of angels saw mankind as entirely untruthful or entirely disharmonious, but collectively they saw a world where truth and peace would be inviable.

"What did God do? He took 'truth' and threw it to the ground." He gave us the Torah here on earth ("the ground"), a teaching which guides us, in every area of life, in how to balance the sensitivities of truth and peace (Rabbi Hayyim Soloveichik, 19th-20th century).

28. Be fruitful and multiply. Technically according to Jewish law, the responsibility to "be fruitful and multiply" rests on the man, and not the woman. This, however, points to the spiritual superiority of women. Knowing that men are inclined to deviate from their primary mission in this world, to rear the next generation in a functional family unit, God commanded them to do so by the force of the law. Women, who are more instinctively attuned to this God-given mission, do not need the law to tell them what they know already to be true.

Thus, the stronger legal emphasis on the man is, paradoxically, suggestive of an inferior spiritual status (Rabbi Menahem Mendel Schneerson, 20th century).

29. Plants ... fruit ... shall be food for you. God did not allow Adam and his wife to kill a creature and to eat its flesh. They were only permitted to eat the vegetation, as were the animals. Later, He permitted the sons of Noah to eat flesh (see Genesis 9:3; Rashi, 11th century).

They shall be food for you, ³⁰ for all the wild animals of the earth, for all the birds of the skies, and for everything which moves upon the earth that is alive! The food (for humans and animals) shall be plant vegetation (only)!”—and that is what happened.

human ability to contrast and compare, observe and ponder all of Creation. ʿAdam could envision spiritual concepts with his mind, and, at the same time, experience physical phenomena with his body. The ability to see this “bigger picture” is God’s exclusive gift to mankind (Rabbi Simḥah Bunem of Przysucha, 18th–19th century).

Man’s name—Adam—reflects his gift of free choice. Adam can either mean “comparable” (domeh) or it can refer to the earth (ʿadamah). If man chooses good, then he is comparable to the Divine; if he chooses evil he is like the animals who were formed from the earth. The choice is his (Rabbi Menahem Azariah da Fano, 16th–17th century).

This statement, “Let us,” is phrased in the plural. The Sages teach that when God was about to create man, He consulted with His ministering angels. However, with the creation of woman, God consulted no one.

Therefore, women recite the blessing each morning, “Blessed are You, Lord our God, King of the universe, who has made me according to His will,” because God created woman as He willed, without consulting others (Rabbi Jacob Meshullam Ornstein of Lvov, 19th century).

When God came to create man, the angels split into groups. The angels of kindness and angels of righteousness were in favor of man who, they argued, would perform kind and charitable acts. But the angels of truth and angels of peace opposed man’s creation, arguing that humanity would be torn apart with lies and quarrels.

What did God do? He took “truth” and threw it to the ground (Genesis Rabbah).

The angels’ arguments are puzzling. Why did the angels of kindness assume that mankind would be entirely charitable? And why did the other angels assume that the world would be utmost fervor! What could this lowly generation possibly achieve beyond the accomplishments of our illustrious ancestors?

The answer to this question can be derived from God’s conduct when creating the world. Just as we see that every moment was precious to God, to the extent that He continued working to the very last opportunity, likewise, the final work of the very last generations is of paramount importance (Rabbi Menahem Mendel Schneerson, 20th century).

On the seventh day, He rested. What is the Sabbath? It is the name of God (Zohar).

God’s very name is Sabbath or “rest,” because movement cannot be attributed to Him. Movement is only possible for an entity that exists within time and space. But God does not move from place to place, nor is He limited by time (Rabbi Israel Ba’al Shem Tov, 18th century).

3. God blessed the seventh day. The peace and pleasure that your soul finds on the Sabbath is so great that it is as if you have been given an additional soul. When this condition ceases at the end of the Sabbath, and you re-enter the period of hard work and stress, it is as if this additional soul has departed from you, and you become weakened (Rabbi Solomon b. Abraham Adret, 13th century).

The Seventh Day—God Rests from Work

2¹ The skies, the earth and all their numerous components were completed.
² On the seventh day, God completed His work that He had made. On the seventh day, He rested from all His work that He had done.

³ God blessed the seventh day (so that a double portion of manna should descend in its honor) and He sanctified it (so that no manna should descend on the Sabbath itself), because on that (day) God rested from all His work that He had created, (for the remaining work which was left) to be done (on the Sabbath, He carried out on Friday instead, by doubling His workload).

31. The sixth day. You will notice that the other days of creation are described simply as “a third day” or “a fourth day,” unlike “the sixth day.”

The article the hints to the unique “sixth day” made eternally famous in another context, namely, the sixth day of the month of Sivan, the day that the Torah was given at Sinai. By linking the conclusion of Creation with the event at Sinai, the Torah informs you that one was conditional upon the other. God stipulated with the works of Creation, “If Israel accepts the Torah, you will continue to exist. If not, I will return you to primordial nothingness!” (Babylonian Talmud, Shabbat 88a).

2:2 On the seventh day, God completed. How was Creation completed on the seventh day, when God merely rested? God continued working all the way up to the Sabbath and entered the Sabbath “by a hairsbreadth.”

Another answer: The world was lacking one thing—rest. When the Sabbath came, rest came. The work of Creation was then completed and finished (Rashi, 11th century).

Rashi explains that God worked until the last possible moment. What was gained by this feat of precision? God was teaching a lesson to mankind about the preciousness of time: So long as you have the opportunity to carry out your Divinely ordained mission in this world, you should utilize every moment in order to realize your fullest potential, pushing every allocation of time to its utmost limits.

Also, you might bemoan the fact that you are living in a spiritually desensitized generation. Gone are the days of the prophets and Talmudic sages, when the people served God with the and not the “Why?” For him, dignity—“Divine image”—is translated as control: “Fill the earth and take control of it.”

Adam the second asks “Why?” The living soul breathed into his nostrils by God indicates his primary concern with the spiritual and the Divine. He is not a practical, creative being, but one interested in introspection and self-discovery.

Contemporary man has failed to take notice of the duality in Adam. The creative enterprises of our civilization have led us to deny that Adam the second exists. Man’s ties to religion are not motivated by a desire for introspection and redemption, but to furthering his sense of dignity and success. For this reason, contemporary majestic man stands as an incomplete being (Rabbi Joseph B. Soloveitchik, 20th century).

8. God planted a garden in Eden. God did not initially create man within the Garden of Eden, rather, He placed him there afterwards. This was in order that man should see how unpleasant the world was, so that he should not imagine that the entire world was as beautiful as Eden (Rabbi Hezekiah b. Manoah, 13th century).

As a result of being brought into Eden from the outside, man would recognize the kindness God had performed for him by placing him in Eden (Rabbi David Kimḥi, 12th–13th century).

2:6 When you pray to God, it is not merely that God “listens” to your prayers from above and responds accordingly. The process of prayer itself refines you spiritually, rendering you a suitable receptacle for additional Divine blessings. The receipt of a blessing is the direct outcome of sincere, focused prayer.

This process is mirrored in the physical world by the method in which rain is formed. Rain is not a new entity that is formed in heaven, but rather, the same “mist” that ascends from the ground, forms clouds and eventually condenses into rain which showers back down onto the earth.

vegetation of the field yet grown, because God, Almighty God, had not brought rain upon the earth (since) there was no man to (appreciate the rain and) work the soil.

⁶ (God caused) a mist to ascend from the earth (moistening the clouds in order to) soak the entire surface of the ground (so that man should be created from moist earth). ⁷ God, Almighty God, formed man out of soil from (the four corners of) the earth. He blew into his nostrils a living soul, and man became a living, (thinking and speaking) being.

⁸ God, Almighty God, planted a garden in Eden to the east, and placed there the man that He had formed. ⁹ (In the garden) God, Almighty God, made every tree that is pleasant to look at and good to eat grow out from the ground. The Tree of Life (grew) in the middle of the garden, and the Tree of Knowledge of good and evil (also grew in the garden).

¹⁰ A river flowed out of Eden to water the garden, and from there it separated and became the source of four riverheads. ¹¹ The name of one is Pishon (the Nile), which surrounds the entire land of Havilah, where there is gold. ¹² The gold of that land is good. Crystal and onyx (are found) there. ¹³ The name of the second river is

6. (God caused) a mist to ascend from the earth. This first rain came in response to man's prayer (Rashi, 11th century).

7. God formed man out of soil from the earth. In creating man, God gathered soil from the entire earth, from all four directions, so that wherever man would die, the earth would accept him for burial (Rashi).

He blew into his nostrils a living soul. This scriptural analogy illustrates that the soul contains a deeper manifestation of Divinity than the rest of the world, since it was "blown" out from God's "innards," rather than the more "superficial" creative method of Divine "speech." When you blow, you exhale from deep inside your body (Nahmanides, 13th century).

In the case of animals and plants God created the soul and body together as a single unit. In creating man, God first created a lifeless body into which He later infused a "soul of life." The soul of man is simply so high in comparison to the body that it could not reasonably be formed as a single unit. Rather, a separate act of God was required to achieve the astounding union between them (Rabbi Shneur Zalman of Lyady, 18th century).

In the first account of Adam's creation (Genesis 1:27), we are told that man was made "in the image of God," but we are not informed how his body was fashioned, only why he was created: "Be fruitful and multiply. Fill the earth and take control of it" (ibid. 28). Here, in the second account of Adam's creation, this emphasis on controlling the world is lacking. Instead, we find a greater insight into the interior workings of man: "He blew into his nostrils a living soul."

These two accounts speak of two distinct "types" of men that exist within us all. Adam the first is a creator. He expresses his "Divine image" through practical activity in the world. Adam the first is not busy with the metaphysical questions of life; he is concerned only with the "How"

“ Adam was placed in the Garden of Eden “to cultivate it and to guard it” (v. 15), and only after that did God tell him, “You may eat freely from every tree of the Garden” (v. 16).

Do not strive towards a state of life in which you can enjoy the maximum pleasure with the minimum effort. Human nature is such that you derive true pleasure only if you are a partner in its attainment, through your own exertion. If you receive it entirely gratis it is degrading to you, as though you were receiving charity, “bread of shame.”

And the harder the work, the sweeter tastes the fruit of achievement.

2:22 The Zohar teaches that a man and his wife are, in essence, two halves of the same body. So, according to the Kabbalah, it would not be correct to say that women are “exempt” from some of the commandments incumbent on men. Rather, as Rabbi Isaac Luria writes, “Once the man has observed the commandment, there is no need for the woman to do it separately, for she was already included with him when he carried out the command.”

15. And settled him in the Garden of Eden. God enticed him with pleasant words and persuaded him to enter (Rashi, 11th century).

18. It is not good that man is alone. People might mistakenly assume, “There are two dominions! God alone rules over the upper worlds and He has no partner, and man is the sole ruler of the lower worlds, and he has no partner!” (Rashi, 11th century).

The creation of man differed from the creation of other living species in that man was created as a single individual, unlike the other living creatures, which were created in pairs. It was God's design that the human race, all humans everywhere and at all times, should know that we all descend from the one and the same single progenitor, a fully developed human being created in the image of God, so that no human being could claim superior ancestral origin (see Mishnah, Sanhedrin 4:5). This would make it easier to cultivate a real feeling of kinship in all interhuman relationships (Rabbi Menahem Mendel Schneerson, 20th century).

I will make him a helpmate opposite him. If he is worthy, she will be a helpmate. If he is not worthy, she will be against him, to fight him (Rashi, 11th century).

2:23 In the supernal realms, both Din (severity) and Hesed (love) are always a good thing. Down here, however, the world cannot always tolerate severity, unless it has undergone tikkun (spiritual healing).

The Kabbalah teaches that Adam had a first wife, Lilith, who was rooted in Din. She soon passed away as the young, fresh world was not yet ready for harshness. Eve—Adam’s second wife—was rooted in Hesed.

The two wives are alluded to here: the hard “bone from my bones”—Lilith; and the softer “flesh from my flesh”—Eve. And “this”—second wife, Eve—“shall be called woman.”

“Did God perhaps say?” Is it really so terrible if you do not listen to Him?

Simply minimizing the importance of the Torah can lead you to become lax in observing it (Rabbi Isaac Meir Alter of Gur, 19th century).

4. Your eyes will be opened and you will be like God (with the ability to create worlds and) knowing good and evil. The Kabbalah teaches that all of our souls were included in the “universal soul” of Adam. This means, presumably, that we were also there at the moment Adam sinned and ate from the Tree of Knowledge. Why, then, did we not stop him from eating?

We had to let him eat the fruit, because, otherwise, the serpent’s lie would have remained unrefuted. The serpent had promised, “Your eyes will be opened and you will be like God, with the ability to create worlds and knowing good and evil,” so Adam had to eat the fruit to prove that he would remain a human being and no more (Rabbi Elimelech of Lyzhansk, 18th century).

Almighty God, built the side that He had taken from man into a woman, and He brought her to man.²³ Man said, “(After searching for a mate among all the animals and failing,) this time (I have found the) bone from my bones, and flesh from my flesh. This shall be called ’ishah (woman) because she was taken from ’ish (man).”²⁴ Therefore, a man shall leave his father and his mother, and cling to his wife, and they shall become one flesh (through their children).

The Sin of the Tree of Knowledge

They were both naked, the man and his wife, and they were not ashamed (since they had no evil inclination, but their nakedness aroused the interest of the serpent).

3¹ The serpent was cunning, more than all the beasts of the field that God, Almighty God, had made. It said to the woman, “Did God perhaps say, ‘You shall not eat from any of the trees of the garden?’”

² The woman said to the serpent, “We may eat from the fruit of the trees of the garden,³ but from the fruit of the tree that is in the middle of the garden, God has said, “You shall not eat of it, and you shall not touch it, lest you die.”

⁴ The serpent said to the woman, “You will surely not die.⁵ God (told you not to eat it, because He) knows that on the day that you eat from it, your eyes will be opened, and you will be like God (with the ability to create worlds, and) knowing good and evil.”

⁶ The woman (believed the serpent) that the tree was good food (that would make a person like God), that it was desirable to the eyes (for it would open them), and that the tree was desirable to make one wise (knowing good and evil). She took of its fruit and she ate (it), and she also gave (some to the cattle and wild animals, and fearing that she would die and that her husband would remarry, she gave some) to her husband (who was) with her, and he ate (it).

Through merely seeing the physical animal, Adam was able to determine its spiritual source (Rabbi Isaiah Horowitz, 16th–17th century).

Man’s naming of the animals connected the spiritual source of each creature with its existence on the physical plane (Rabbi Shneur Zalman of Lyady, 18th century).

22. God, Almighty God, built the side that He had taken from man into a woman. “Understanding” (binah, spelled: bet-yod-nun-he) has the same etymology as the term “God built” (yiven, spelled: yod-bet-nun), implying that He granted women understanding. This teaches you that God has endowed women with more understanding than men (Babylonian Talmud, Niddah 45b).

3:1 Did God perhaps say? The serpent’s question is written with a dismissive tone, minimizing the significance of God’s command and denigrating the consequence of transgressing it.

14. God, Almighty God said to the serpent, “Because you have done this, you are (now) cursed, etc.” Whoever sets his eyes on something that does not belong to him will not obtain what he desires, and what he already has will be taken away from him.

The serpent in the Garden of Eden craved something that was out of bounds—it lusted after Eve—so the thing it wanted it did not get, and what it already had was taken away from it. God said, “Originally, I said that the serpent should be the king of all animals, but, ‘You are now cursed more than all the cattle and more than all the wild animals of the field!’ I said that the serpent should walk with an erect posture, but now, ‘You shall go on your belly.’ I said that it should eat the same food as man eats, but now it will eat dust. The serpent had planned to kill Adam and wed Eve, but now, God said, “I shall place hatred between you and between the woman and between your descendants and between her descendants” (v. 14-15; Babylonian Talmud, Sotah 9b).

You shall eat soil all the days of your life! How is this a curse? Soil is found almost everywhere, so it seems as if the snake is being blessed, as he never will lack nourishment.

Being surrounded by his sustenance will ensure that the snake never has to ask God to provide for him. Unlike the other animals who pray to God, as described by King David, “He gives the beast his food and to the young ravens who cry” (Psalms 147:9), the snake is given everything he needs. This is the curse: being cast out and sent away from God’s Presence (Rabbi Simḥah Bunem of Przysucha, 18th–19th century).

3:7 After the sin, the serpent caused a spiritual pollutant, called zuhama, to enter Eve’s soul. This pollutant would plague all the souls of her children until it was finally eradicated when the Torah was given at Sinai.

But when the people sinned with the Golden Calf, it returned, and we will only rid ourselves of it completely when the New Era finally comes.

⁷ The (intellectual) “eyes” of both of them were opened, and they realized that they were naked (of Divine commandments, having ignored the only command they had been given by God). They sewed together fig leaves (from the tree) and made themselves loincloths.

⁹ God, Almighty God, called to the man, and said to him, “Where are you?” (to engage him in conversation).

¹⁰ (Man) said, “I heard Your sound in the garden, and I was afraid because I am naked, so I hid.”

¹¹ (God) said, “Who told you that you are naked? Have you eaten from the tree from which I commanded you not to eat?”

¹² The man said, “The woman whom You gave (to be) with me gave me from the tree, and I ate.”

¹³ God, Almighty God, said to the woman, “What is this that you have done?”

The woman said, “The serpent misled me, and I ate.”

¹⁴ God, Almighty God, said to the serpent, “Because you have done this, you are (now) cursed more than all the cattle and more than all the wild animals of

7. They sewed together fig leaves (from the tree) and made themselves loincloths. Rabbi Nehemiah said, “The tree from which Adam and Eve ate was a fig tree, for it is logical that the thing with which they sinned—the fig—became the means through which the damage was repaired, when ‘they sewed together fig leaves’ as clothing” (Babylonian Talmud, Sanhedrin 70b).

13. The serpent misled me, and I ate. Everything in the world contains holy “sparks.” Nothing is devoid of these sparks, even wood and stones. In all of man’s actions, even in a sin he commits, there are sparks.

What are the sparks in a sin? Repentance. When repenting for the sin, you elevate the sparks contained within it to the Supernal World. This is the inner meaning of “Is my sin too great to bear?” (4:13)—lit. “to carry,” i.e., to be raised and elevated on high (Rabbi Israel Ba’al Shem Tov, 18th century).

“ When Adam committed the sin, he experienced a Divine call demanding, “Where are you?” (3:9). Do you realize what you have done and what you are supposed to do? From time to time you should also ask yourself, “Where am I?” Take a moment of introspection and soul-searching to find yourself again.

18. Thorns and thistles will grow (with) your (crops). When God said to Adam, “Thorns and thistles will grow with your crops and you will eat the herbs of the field,” tears flowed from Adam’s eyes. He cried to God, “Master of the universe! Will my donkey and I eat from the same trough? Being confined to a donkey’s diet, will we humans be reduced to having the same nature and intelligence as a donkey?”

When God said to him, “With the sweat of your face ... will you eat bread” (3:19), assuring him of a uniquely human food that stimulates intelligence, he was relieved (Babylonian Talmud, Pesahim 118a, according to Rabbi Samuel Edels, 16th–17th century).

21. He clothed them. The Torah begins with an act of kindness and ends with an act of kindness. It begins with kindness, as the verse states, “God, Almighty God, made for Adam and for his wife skintight garments and He clothed them.” It ends with kindness, as the verse states, “(God) buried him in the valley” (Deuteronomy 34:6; Babylonian Talmud, Sotah 14a).

the field! You (will have your legs cut off so that you) shall go on your belly, and you shall eat soil all the days of your life! ¹⁵ I shall place hatred between you and between the woman (you desired), and between your descendants and between her descendants. (Man) will crush you (on the) head, and you will bite his heel.”

¹⁶ To the woman He said, “I will greatly increase your anguish (of rearing children) and your (labor pains of) pregnancy. You will give birth to children in pain. You will desire (to be with) your husband but he will rule over you (to be with you when he desires).”

¹⁷ To man He said, “Since you listened to your wife’s voice, and you ate from the tree about which I commanded you, saying, ‘Do not eat from it,’ the ground will be cursed because of you (producing loathsome insects), and you will toil to eat from it all the days of your life. ¹⁸ (When you sow seeds, then artichokes and cardoons that have) thorns and thistles will grow (with) your (crops), and you will eat the(se artichokes, cardoons and other) herbs of the field (that take a long time to prepare, due to lack of an alternative. ¹⁹ Only) with the sweat of your face (after much toil) will you eat bread, until you go back to the earth from where you were taken. For you are (from the) soil, and to soil you will return.”

²⁰ The man named his wife Eve [HAVvah], because she was the mother of all life [HAI].

²¹ God, Almighty God, made for Adam and for his wife skintight garments (alternatively: garments of animal skins), and He clothed them.

Expulsion from the Garden of Eden

[FOURTH READING] ²² God, Almighty God, said, “Look! Man has become unique in the (lower) world by himself (since, unlike the animals,) he has the ability of knowing good and evil. Now, (there is a fear that) perhaps he will stretch out his hand and take also from the Tree of Life and eat (from it, and he will) live forever (and is likely to lead others astray, as they will think he is a god).”

²³ God, Almighty God, sent him out of the Garden of Eden to cultivate the earth from which he had been taken. ²⁴ He drove the man out, and to the east (side) of the Garden of Eden He stationed angels (of destruction) and the flame (alternatively: blade) of the revolving sword, to guard the way to the Tree of Life.

Abel and his offering, but to Cain and his offering He did not turn" (v. 4-5). Was it necessary to ask him, "Why is your face dejected"?

God was actually asking Cain a more subtle question: What is the main reason motivating your anger and dejection? Is it because your sacrifice was rejected, or because your brother's sacrifice was accepted? Which was more painful to you? (Rabbi Hayyim Soloveichik, 19th-20th century).

7. Surely, if you improve yourself you will be forgiven, etc. God said to the Jewish people: I created the evil impulse and I created the Torah as its antidote. If you study the Torah, you will not be won over by the evil impulse, as it is written, "Surely, if you improve yourself you will be forgiven." But if you do not study the Torah, you will be caught by the evil impulse, as the verse continues, "sin is crouching in wait." Furthermore, the evil impulse spends all his energy trying to make you sin, as it is written, "It is longing to entice you." But if you desire, you can overpower it by learning Torah, as the passage concludes, "but you can rule over it" (Babylonian Talmud, Kiddushin 30b).

(Your) sin is crouching (in wait) at the entrance. It is far easier to hold fast to your values when you are within your comfort zone than when you are outside it. "Sin is crouching (in wait) at the entrance"—the evil impulse waits for you to emerge from your comfort zone to introduce obstacles and challenges (Rabbi Abraham Samuel Benjamin Sofer, 19th century).

9. God said to Cain, "Where is Abel your brother?" He said, "I don't know. Am I my brother's guardian?" In this conversation, God and Cain were discussing who was responsible for Abel's death. God asked Cain, "Where is Abel your brother?"

food for thought

1. How would you react if you were a victim of jealousy?

2. To what extent are you able to rejoice at others' success?

3. What would you do to show God great appreciation?

Cain and Abel

4¹ The man knew his wife Eve (before the sin), and she conceived and bore Cain (together with a twin girl. When he was born) she said, “I have acquired [KaNiti] a man (as a partner) with God.”² She gave birth again, to his brother Abel (together with two girls).

Abel was a shepherd of flocks (because he did not want to work with the land, which was cursed), and Cain was a worker of the land.

³ It was at the end of (a number of) days, that Cain brought some of the (worst) fruit of the land as an offering to God. ⁴ Abel also offered from the firstborn of his flocks, from their fattest ones.

God turned to Abel and to his offering (and it was consumed by a fire from heaven),⁵ but to Cain and to his offering He did not turn. Cain became very angry, and his face grew dejected.

⁶ God said to Cain, “Why are you angry, and why is your face dejected? ⁷ Surely, if you improve yourself you will be forgiven? If you do not improve yourself, however, then (your) sin is crouching (in wait) at the entrance (of your grave. The evil inclination) is longing (to entice you), but you can rule over it (if you want).”

⁸ Cain (started an argument) with Abel his brother (to find a pretext to kill him). Then, when they were in the field, Cain assaulted Abel his brother and killed him.

⁹ God said to Cain, “Where is Abel your brother?”

He said, “I don’t know. Am I my brother’s guardian?”

4:1-2 After the sin, the forces of good and evil became inextricably bound together. Abel’s soul was primarily good, with a little evil mixed in; and Cain’s soul was primarily evil, with a kernel of good. In fact, that kernel of good in Cain’s soul was of the highest quality, as he was the firstborn.

4:3-4 It was at the end of days, that Cain brought ... Abel also offered from the firstborn of his flocks. Cain came to offer sacrifices to God “at the end of days” when he was old and anticipating death. Abel, however, had served God even when he was young and full of vigor. That was why God accepted Abel’s offering (Rabbi Simhah Bunem of Przysucha, 18th–19th century).

Of his flocks. Abel brought an offering from sheep, the most inferior type of cattle, demonstrating his lack of interest in worldly matters (Rabbi Bahya b. Asher, 13th century).

From their fattest ones. This teaches you that when serving God you should always choose the best. In addition to choosing the best animals for sacrifices, your houses of worship should be more beautiful than your own houses, the food that you offer to the hungry should be better than your own and the clothes with which you clothe the poor should be finer than your own (Maimonides, 12th century).

6. Why is your face dejected? The Torah seems to make patiently clear the reason for Cain’s dejection: “God turned to

10. Your brother's blood (and the blood of his would-be descendants) is crying out. In monetary cases, if a witness testifies falsely, it is sinful. However, he can still pay compensation to the person who suffered a loss through the false testimony, and the sin is forgiven.

With capital cases, however, the false witness cannot correct his wrong. He is held responsible for the blood of the man who was executed through his false testimony and for the blood of the victim's lost descendants that would have been born (Babylonian Talmud, Sanhedrin 37a).

13. Is my sin too great to bear? Cain was the first person to repent before God. God set him as an example for all future penitents (Genesis Rabbah).

Cain's repentance consisted of three practical phases.

(1) Confession—Cain declared to God, “My sin is too great to bear.” (2) Exile—“He dwelt in the land of the wanderers” (v. 16).

(3) Rebound into positive action—There is a tremendous temptation for the penitent to remain low-spirited for the rest of his days. The mere thought of his past deeds, which cannot be erased from his mind, is sufficient to plague him with feelings of inferiority. Obviously, in the midst of such a mood he will find it difficult to be active within the world, as he will be constantly wondering, “Who am I to carry out a holy activity like this?”

The challenge of the penitent is that when his repentance is complete, he must propel himself “outwards” into the world. He must free himself from his feelings of inadequacy and start to contribute constructively to the world in the most expansive manner possible.

kabbalah bites

4:15 The Hebrew term used in reference to Cain's vengeance is YuKaM. This alludes to Cain's future reincarnations: Yitro (Jethro), Korah and Mitzri, the Egyptian whom Moses killed. (See: Exodus 2:11, 18:1; Numbers 16:1.)
